Comic Con

On March 29th all your greatest heroes and villains will be at the Rod!!!

Stop in to participate in panel presentations, a Magic Tournament, table top gaming, video gaming, art gallery, artist alley, vendor booths, trivia competitions, a photo booth, and a costume contest. Guest speakers include Phil Hester, Andrew Hope and Ramzi Fawaz ! The event is free and open to the public, so you can even bring the kids in to participate in the coloring and costume competition and scavenger hunt. Who knows what heroes and/or villains will be lurking about? For a list of all speakers, topics and participation information see:

<http://www.library.uni.edu/rod-con>. For pre-views of some of the artists see our Facebook event page at: <https://www.facebook.com/events/278200425667960/>

YouTube

Rod Library has updated their YouTube account....YES, we have videos on YouTube!!! See the latest Hunger Games video, Comic Con promotional videos, or the videos broadcast on the Jumbotron at the football game in October. You'll also see several "how-to" videos to help you find information for your latest assignment. You can get to the page by going to the bottom of the library homepage and clicking on the "YouTube" icon or search for "Rod Library" on the YouTube site. We are always adding to our playlist so check back often or subscribe to our channel!

Ask Us!

Did you ever wonder if the library provides access to the New York Times? Or whether you can print to a library printer from your personal laptop? Or how to schedule a research consultation with a librarian? Answers to these questions and more can be found through our Ask Us! FAQ page. Type in a keyword or question -- we've answered more than 130, and the list is growing. If the page doesn't cover your question, contact us through one of the ways listed on the right-hand side of the FAQ page, such as chat, text, and email. Also, look for a black "Ask Us" tab on the right side of many Rod Library pages.
