Deception and Visual Illusion

On November 17th, at 7pm, Prof Roy Behrens will discuss the camouflage techniques used on naval ships during World War I. The "razzle dazzle" or "dazzle camouflage" was intended to interfere with the German U-boats' ability to target Allied ships. Join us on the first floor of Rod Library to see images of these designs and learn about Iowa's contributions to this program.

Did You Know....?

I know we've had a few changes and sometimes it's hard to keep up. Here are a few reminders. There are 2 printer choices when you are in the library. The "Library Black and White" option will print to any printer in the building. You simply go to the release station, login and release your print job. "Library COLOR" will print to the color printer/copier/scanner in the Learning Commons. You will need your University ID to release the print job and charge your U-bill.

The "Rod Scheduler" button on the home page allows you to reserve your study room in advance. Simply find the room and time you need, LOGIN in the upper right hand corner of the screen and reserve your room. All current restrictions apply (one three-hour reservation per day). Reservations take priority, so if you are in a room be sure to login and reserve or risk losing the room. If you need assistance, the "Help" screen has a great "How To" video.
