Need a topic?

Try CQ Researcher or Opposing Viewpoints

(UNI Library page – Choose “Databases A-Z”)

Need Background Information? After you've visited Wikipedia try these:

Books

Because:

1. Professors love them
2. Books are written to introduce you to a topic
3. Focus! Use the index or table of contents.
Then read only those pages that are relevant, that way you can use multiple books.
Multiple books will look good in your bibliography.
4. To find books – UNI Library page – Choose “Books & More” (then choose the Advanced Search)

Better than Wikipedia:

Gale Virtual Reference Library or CQ Researcher

(UNI Library page – Choose “Databases A-Z”)

Power Searching:

For more focus and more choices use -

Advanced Search

title / subject / abstract

“gas giants”

gravity and orbits and comets

(meteors or comets or asteroids)

gravit* = gravity + gravitation + gravitational

( * does not work with Google)

Find articles:

1. OneSearch! (Library Homepage)
2. Academic OneFile (Databases A-Z)
3. Google Scholar (finds scholarly/research articles)

Research Articles

- For Business – use ABI/INFORM
- For Education – use ERIC
- For History or Humanities – use JSTOR
- For Psychology – use PsycINFO
- For almost Anything – use ScienceDirect or Web of Science
(UNI Library page – Choose “Databases A-Z”)
